

Victoria Bassetti is senior advisor and senior counsel at States United Democracy Center, a new pro-democracy law firm and think tank founded by Governor Christie Todd Whitman and Ambassador Norm Eisen. She pioneered research into the recent election subversion trend and anti-democratic candidates taking over election administration posts. She is also the co-host of Yahoo News' top news podcast, Skullduggery. Before joining the center, she was a fellow at the Brennan Center for Justice at the New York University School of Law. She is the author of Electoral Dysfunction and a contributing author to This Is What Democracy Looked Like and the forthcoming Overcoming Trumpery. She was what Senator Chris Murphy described as his "co-pilot" on his recent book The Violence Inside Us. Her writings have been published in the New York Times, Washington Post, Financial Times, POLITICO, USA Today, Washington Monthly, and Harpers.

She worked on Capitol Hill for almost a decade. Among other posts, she served as chief counsel to Senator Dick Durbin of Illinois and for Senator Herb Kohl of Wisconsin. It is odd that she worked for Midwesterners because she is from the South, from Louisiana, and now lives in Brooklyn.
